On being scientifically literate: initiation into a discourse

by Pat Beattie

Literacy—defined here as the ability to operate effectively in any of the sociocultural environments one moves in—comes in many forms.

7

Maintaining an ongoing commitment: an interview with Syed Javed

Syed Javed talks to Fine Print about funding and projects, and an accompanying article 'Unpacking science and technology', written with Sue Helmes, takes a close look at science and ALBE.

12

A crisis in class?

by Rod Fawns

Educators recognise the importance of scientific literacy, but does anyone else?

14

Science prac

Debbie Prescott, Rod Hodgins, Janet Nicholds, Mex Butler and Sue Bettens discuss their work in the field.

19

A science library: selection of reading resources from ARIS

Some of the 70 references provided by ARIS when Fine Print inquired about a list of science reading for adults.

Regulars

23

Foreign Correspondence

An interesting and often poignant account of literacy programmes in Eritrea.

26

Open Forum

Ann Dunn on sourcing teaching materials; time, patience and Josie Rose help a class discover the Internet's educational potential; and, on the Internet again, Chris Anderson takes his class to the stock exchange.

29

Policy Update

What is 'technacy', and why is it important?

32

Beside the Whiteboard

Kaye Elias talks about 15 years of teaching adult literacy at the Council of Adult Education, and discusses her technique of making literacy even more relevant by linking it to current events.
