Features

3

The dark side of accreditation: a system for the privileged?

by Helen Macrae

The accreditation system, once a key to the future, is now run by the privileged for the privileged.

6

Accreditation and low-level learners: another look at the CGEA

An email panel, with teachers Wendy Corvell, Jacinta Agostinelli and Anne Dunn discuss the principles behind the Certificates in General Education for Adults.

9

Reflections on literacy, workplaces and training packages: hearing many voices

by Peter Waterhouse

If the night has a thousand eyes, then the workplace has as many voices, and the wise literacy teacher will do well to stop and listen.

12

Stories from the field: views on some accredited curricula

Three very different accredited courses and some of the issues that surround them.

Regulars

19

Foreign Correspondence

What is a dialogic literacy circle?

It is found in Spain, but doesn't involve tilting at windmills, as Liz Suda explains.

22

Open Forum

Low funding and competitive tendering are threatening the efficacy of Adult ESL and Adult Literacy courses, writes Karen Manwaring, and Belinda Bold discusses the integration of literacy into training packages.
